The best for stability

The stability and ease of engaging the tripod are always key. We've seen the collapse of the sticks through no fault of the set up easy to carry, even on a pack.

Ask any hunter whose livelihood depends on making big shots count and they'll tell you they bring two triggers. The one on their rifle, and the one on their Trigger Stick from Primos. It's the only shooting stick that allows you to make quick and steady one-hand adjustments to get on the mark faster. Whether you're sitting, kneeling or standing simply squeeze the trigger again for a last second micro adjustment without losing your sight picture. Guns & Ammo

I've seen hunters with accurate rifles make poor shots on game in the field. However, most bad shots boil down to one issue: an unstable rest. Primos' Gen3 Trigger Sticks are an effective solution to that problem, and you'll find plenty of other uses for them, too.

We are really glad we bought the Jim Shockey Trigger Stick Gen3 Tall Tripod shooting stick. After receiving it, we trained at the range with it using many different shooting distances. It was quite while carrying in the field. Used on two antelope and one Mule Deer.
