Really uniform. Older guns, cast bullets and black powder need the longer, thinner cases. Starlings is the only brass that fills the bill.

My recently acquired Marlin 336CB in 38/55 works great using Starline 2.125" cases and Lyman # 380681 cast bullets sized .381!

Last order I bought 250 of these long brass for my Marlin M1893. It is typical Marlin with a 0.381" bore and this brass is perfect for the task. It will shoot 1.25" at 50 yds with open sights and a cast 260 grn bullet sized to 0.382". Starline is top quality from the start for all my needs.

Starline is the only Brass that chambers in my Marlin 336CB's with the Ranchdog bullets I cast. If you are shooting a Marlin 336CB in 38-55 you know that they prefer a fatter cast bullet, this brass is what you want. Don't waist your money or time on anything else. For the Marlin 336CB in 38-55 this is the better length of brass.
