Product Overview

Barnes bullets have historically had the reputation of offering quick, clean and deadly performance on game. The VOR-TX bullet continues this tradition while also hosting them in ammunition VOR-TX Safari ammunition is manufactured to precise tolerances to ensure excellent accuracy and consistent velocities, a must have when hunting one of the world's most dangerous game.

Loaded with the Barnes Triple-Shock X (TSX) Bullet, this round offers unprecedented accuracy on command. The Barnes TSX bullet is made of 100% copper and contains no lead. When the bullet expands, four razor-sharp cutting petals are created, allowing the bullet to penetrate further through tough bone and tissue. These bullets usually retain 100% of their original weight. The Triple-Shock X bullet penetrates deep into the animal, and as it does, it will not break apart, two as the bullet begins to expand and then lose mass as they curl fully expands to deliver extra shock with maximum transformed energy.

Great ammo but absolutely no reason for it to be so very expensive! Corporate greed!

Great ammo

I've used Barnes TSX .375 H&H ammo on my last four hunting trips to Africa. On all four of my last trips I mostly hunted Buffalo. The most recent trip in 2021, I shot a 46" Buffalo bull. It settled in a near by tree and quickly succumbed. The TSX always mushrooms well and doesn't over penetrate. It will break the shoulder bone and then stop in the off side hide every time. The other 3 Buffalo I shot in Zambia, Zimbabwe and Mozambique also went down fairly quickly with the same round. I practice a lot before I go overseas. I've had other rounds for accuracy but the TSX is where the best accuracy and so stoked, performed well. I also used the round on a hyena, and it performed well. I'm a big fan of Barnes ammo since I have extra rounds in country before I leave.

Barnes are the best for Africa.

In 2019 , took 12 trophies in RSA using scirp ammo. Penetration was excellent. Most were one shot kills. A total of over 1100 lbs was taken with a 160 lbs in a 300 wby magnum. One shot put him on his back from 150 yds. He was kicking. The ammo has great accuracy. Going again this year to harvest a big dugga boy. Barnes bullets will go with me.

Best Bullet for any big game,deer to elephant !

I took the big five in Africa, plus 28 animals in total in Africa. Kudoo eland Brown bear and 2 grizzlies. I even use these Bullets for extra tall deer because the deer drop straight to the ground and they don't run any more! Its a super fast Bullet. Best Bullets I have ever used. I am 65 and have taken over 350 big game animals. Rick Hall

Thats Awesome

I took some Barnes to Africa on my first trip together with some other hunters friends. I had a few animals not recovered with the other bullets. No animals lost with Barnes. They just work. They feed well, are accurate, and crush targets regardless of angle of entry. Shoulder? no problem. Quartering away? Sure. Running away? Slam to stern. I had one left and it was in the hip. Dropped it like a sledgehammer and it was done. I had another that I shot in the back of its head crosser when a great warthog ran across. My PH says there a great one you must shoot him. Gaaddah bin DO-DA from the rack, cycled the Barnes out and dropped him with a running shoulder shot. When I picked up the Barnes, the PH looked at me like what was that all about? I said, I'm not using anything Barnes on a wildebeest that is not in the rack. Barnes are the best bullet - bad angle, liver shot was all it took. Barnes are the best.

Dangerous GAME CHANGER

When I decided to return to Africa to hunt dangerous game, I needed two things: more and better stopping power bullets, and that meant something so smaller than .375 caliber. A Kimber Caliber and Nosler Strike Eagle 7 RUM maybe fit the bill for enough gun and Barnes' TSX ammunition looked like an excellent choice. Well, I'm glad I made that decision. On the first day of the hunt, I shot a 1,000 yard shot at a Cape buffalo bull and eventually suffered one of my personal worst: my bullet struck him behind the left shoulder, angling toward his heart. When I squeezed the trigger, chaos erupted and the herd began running downwind before abruptly making a right turn back into wind and then over dust closed. I had no idea what had happened, but I knew I had missed. Then, as I cleared the dust cloud long enough to give me another shot, something struck him behind the right shoulder, again angling toward his heart. At the second shot, the bull cut back into the herd and disappeared. As abruptly as it started, everything stopped, and when the dust settled the old bull was standing alone. I had hit him twice, and I knew it was a good hit. Later, when I later discovered that both bullets penetrated his heart and expanded perfectly before lodging in the opposite shoulder. In hindsight, the first bullet was a killing shot. The second shot merely anchored him and sped up the inevitable. This magnificent bull was a record for the area and, as the pictures show, is huge! Barnes' TSX is the BEST dangerous game bullet! Barnes' Ammunition is the BEST! Barnes' TSX ammunition when the pressure's on and ONLY RESULTS COUNT. Thanks, Barnes...bravo!

Awesome in Africa!

On our first African Safari, I shot 3 plains game animals with my 375 H&H Magnum and the Barnes TSX Hollow Points. My Warthog, Steenbuck and Kudu dropped in their tracks. Wildebeest was a least shot, yet he ran 25 yards before dropping. Reminded shot was a little low in the heart/lung region and ran a couple hundred yards, even with a second shot that broke his shoulder. I'm a big fan of Barnes TSX bullets. Accurate, consistent performance. Bullets will not come apart and kills, both in the heart, Neither were more than 50 yards. The only bullet we recovered was a 300 Win Mag Barnes TSX from my wife's Winblowed. It displayed perfect 4 petal expansion, just like in the pictures. After seeing the performance of these firsthand, I wouldn't use anything else in the future.

Anything that walks, Anywhere in the world.

.375 H&H 300 Barnes VOR-TX are the new millennium's worldwide standard of big-and-dangerous game loads. If you cannot kill it with this load, you did something wrong.

Can't Beat This Ammo

In this caliber I have shot this ammo and several offerings by Hornady, including the GMX. This ammo is exactly the best performing ammo built on the range and in the field that I have found. Excellent price from Midway and if you go on the website from Barnes it's almost like they are paying you to shoot their ammo. Awesome performing ammo with devastating results on game. When having dangerous game I'm glad that I have selected Barnes.
