Smokeless Powder, Primers, and Fuses ship from our warehouse with other products. This ensures no more than one Shipping Charge and one HazMat Charge per order (unless you also order products that Ship Separately from MidwayUSA or our Suppliers). While Black Powder ships from our warehouse, in most cases it must ship by itself, therefore it incurs a separate shipping charge. Each order is limited to no more than 20 pounds of Black Powder, and no more than 66 pounds each of Smokeless Powder, Primers, or Fuse. Smokeless Powder, Black Powder, Primers, and Fuses are considered hazardous materials, incur HazMat Charges, and can only ship ground freight within the continental U.S. Due to safety considerations and legal/regulatory reasons, Smokeless Powder, Black Powder, Primers, and Fuses cannot be returned.

Does primer quality degrade with age?

Asked by Jim 4 years ago

Add your answer

Product Owner - gzeluffmd

Not really. This has been debated on older sites and most say no degradation seen in primers that are stored in dry conditions (no obvious wetness), nor high temperature extremes. I still have some LC84 match. 308 ammo that shoots well. Others have said they used primers that were well over 20 years old with good success. Some powders may show some degradation with time but I have used some older 4350 and 4895 without seeing much difference in MV. Recently used some CCI small pistol primers that are 10 years old with no misfires. SFD0C2000.

Can the standard large rifle 210 primer be use in place of the 210M primer for hunting loads?

Asked by mark 4 years ago

Add your answer

Product Owner - ddean

Short answer is yes, long answer is the 210M is manufactured to higher standards than 210. Hence the "match" designation.

The box says 100 Qty but the only options are 1,000 and 5,000. Are those the only options.

Yes, 1000 and 5000 thousands! If they sold them by the 100's you would still have to pay haz-mat. Wouldn't it be foolish to pay 10-20 dollars haz-mat fee for 100-200 primers!!

I have found that Federal Gold Medal Match are consistently of high quality. I have never had one fail and they are the only primer with which I have had this reliability. I use this primer with several calibers and also the Magnum in the Match grade. I'm well satisfied and have no intention of cha...

I'll buy again

Today, I will reload my ammo for my 308. And maybe my brother and I have the time to go to the shooting range and do some shooting and also test out my loads that I have worked on and I also hope I have no squibs or worse. You never know the out comes.

Match grade loads

I use the #210M in all my match-grade loads. they do produce slightly higher velocity over the #210 with the same powder charge.

SOFTER PRIMER THAN WINCHESTER

One of my lever guns would not reliably detonate Winchester primers. Federal primers are considered to be softer than Winchester. The Federal primers have detonated reliably for over 200 rounds at this point

Great primers!

I use these in match loads for my m1a, I also use other primers, depending on which powder I'm using and which bullet weight

I would buy this product again, without hesitation!

The Federal primers have a closer tolerance than Winchester or CCI. Hand-loads are more consistent shot to shot. Little variation in speed (chronograph)

Federal 210M primers

Been using these primers since late 70s. Never had a misfire and with a little work most loads can get single digit SD.
