Due to the packaging and shipping process, case necks are often slightly dinged or bent and need to be rounded up and sized to give proper neck tension. New and/or fired cases must be full-length resized or have the expander ball of the sizing die run through the case neck prior to loading.

Product Information

With Hornady brass you'll get more reloads, greater consistency, predictable performance and accuracy that commodity brass simply can't deliver. We measure for consistent wall concentricity and we run our cases through pressure calibration tests to ensure uniform case expansion. And each and every case is hand inspected. New, unprimed brass. This is not loaded ammunition.

good brass

By Randall F. on Sep 06, 2023

I have used this brass many times and it holds up well. It can be trimmed down if you want 458 Win Mag brass but cannot find. 458 Lott seems to really stretch the brass on full loads so I often down load to save the brass and me. I have had this rifle for 35+ years. I let people at the range fire a few rounds so they can say they have shot a 458 Lott.
