Press Release: 8 August 2019

Following the hugely successful launch of John Rigby & Co.'s leather ankle gaiters in January, the London gunmaker has confirmed the expansion of their product line by releasing a new canvas alternative.

Made in Zimbabwe by the renowned Courteney Boot Company, the gaiters are a must-have for every adventurer planning an African safari. They offer protection for walking in the bushveld preventing thorns, grass seeds, burrs, sand or other debris from working their way into your boots.

Lightweight, breathable and easy to clean, the gaiters measure eight inches in length and are fitted with an elasticated cuff meaning they are easy to put on no matter where you are, plus they will comfortably stretch to fit neatly around your ankles.

Andrew Ambrose, Rigby's head of sales, commented: "After releasing Rigby's first set of ankle gaiters in January, they were a huge hit with our customers selling out within a month of their release. Following the demand from Rigby adventurers worldwide, we made the decision to expand our product line, releasing a new canvas version which pair perfectly with everyday safari-wear."

RRP: £45 GBP | €45 EUR | $49 USD, plus P&P.
